

A WORKMAN DROWNED

At the New Bridge to the Island Yesterday Morning.

THE FIRST LIFE LOST ON THE WORK

Mack Martin, Climbing from a Skiff to the Pile Driver, Slips into the Water and is Drowned—A Sad Coincidence in His Death.

It was a sad coincidence that a few hours after the INTELLIGENCER had quoted one of the contractors on the new bridge to the Island as referring with lively satisfaction to the fact that although the work was nearly completed, there had not been a fatal accident in its progress, one of the employees should lose his life. Shortly after nine o'clock yesterday forenoon Mack Martin, one of the oldest and most valued employees of the firm of Baird Brothers, was drowned in the river beneath the bridge, and his body has not been recovered.

Martin had rowed out to the flat boat on which the pile driver stands, and was in the act of climbing from his skiff upon the boat. He raised himself on a cable by which the boat was moored, but just as he was stepping to the deck of the boat, his foot slipped and he fell into the water.

Before his fellow workmen realized what had happened he had disappeared from sight beneath the flat bottom of the boat. He did not reappear, and was doubtless drowned before his body got to the lower end of the boat.

As soon as they could get to the spot, John Dalton, Tom Down and two other white men, and Jim Breedlove, colored, rushed down and dived. A rope was also dragged under the boat, but the body had not lodged there, as was thought it might.

Workmen at once began to drag the river for the body, but without success. Martin's home was at New Castle, Pa. He was thirty-six years old, and leaves a widow and several children dependent on his wages for support.

A STRANGER DROWNED.

His Clothes, with Papers Giving His Identity, Found in a Skiff Last Night.

Yesterday evening Daniel Mannors called Officer Terrell's attention to a suit of clothes lying in the bow of a fishing boat belonging to Mannors and another man, and moored a short distance below the water works pumping station. The officer went with Mannors and found the suit of clothes, including a full suit of everything a man would ordinarily wear. A boy named Campbell, living in the vicinity, looked at the clothes and said he had seen a man wearing such a suit, go down over the river bank about four o'clock, and no one could be found that could give any further or more definite information.

The clothing was taken to police headquarters, where a search of the pockets revealed a comb, lead pencil, memorandum book and a lot of papers. Among the papers were two legal papers. One was a declaration of particulars in a suit in the United States Court of Pennsylvania. The plaintiff was Robert Thompson, of San Jacinto, Cal., and the defendants Wm. M. Russell, Robert Cowden and Alex. Gasten, all of Mt. Pleasant township, Washington county, Pa. The suit was to recover a tract of land in Mt. Pleasant township, bordering on the lands of Samuel Wilson, Samuel Moore, Alex. McElroy, Thomas Miller and others. The declaration further states that in 1892, the father of the plaintiff and James Thompson, John M. Thompson, Harriet McNary and Margaret J. Russell died and left the land in question to them. One of these sons, John M. Thompson, was then in a state of lunacy and the will made provision for his support and care. By some means, the plaintiff became involved and the share coming to him and moneys due to him as administrator are alleged to have been taken without process of law by the defendants. This article was poorly written and loosely drawn and was held together by pins. It showed no evidence of having been filed with the court and had been changed in places in pencil.

Another document similar in character described a suit and set forth the grounds for action by Robert Thompson, of San Jacinto, Cal., against the county of Washington, Iowa, and was addressed to the United States circuit court, southern and eastern circuit of Iowa. The paper alleges that between the month of October 1885 and October 1890, the agents and officers of the county of Washington, Iowa, unlawfully deprived the plaintiff, Robert Thompson, of the use, possession and enjoyment of a note for $800, bearing 10 per cent interest and made by Robert McNary, September 26, 1880. Also town lots Nos. 5 and 6 in block 26, Brighton, Washington county, Iowa, and the east two-thirds of lot No. 1, in block 7 of the same town. Also, two shares of the capital stock of the National bank of Washington, Iowa, and twenty-six shares of the stock of the Washington National Bank of Iowa. His property is valued at $26,000 and the suit is brought for that amount. The allegation is that "said property was taken under circumstances of great force, violence and oppression."

A telephone message from Washington, Pa., concerning the matter says that Robert Thompson's home is in Mt. Pleasant township, Washington county, Pa., but that he has been away for a long time. He was a plasterer by trade and was known by the nickname "John Lengthy." He was seen in Washington a few days ago and talked to John Thompson, a police officer there. The supposition is that the owner of the clothing, whoever he is, was drowned nearby.

STATE FAIR NOTES.

Large Number of Entries Already Received—Splendid Prospects.

The number of entries so far received is really astonishing. Never before in the history of the association has there been such a rush for space. Every nook and corner of the exposition building has been filled, and a diversified and entertaining exhibit is assured.

The same can be said of the machinery hall. The show of agricultural implements will be magnificent indeed. A. R. Jacob, superintendent of the cattle department, leaves for Youngstown next week. Mr. Sisson, of the sheep department, will take in Wellsville, O., and Washington, Pa. Both gentlemen go in the interest of procuring entries in the cattle, sheep, swine and poultry departments. With the large number of entries already received, and what the above gentlemen will secure, a monster exhibition may be expected.

Mr. Anderson, of the racing committee, left last night for Washington, C. H., Ohio. From there he goes to Wellsville, O., and thence to Youngstown. The association will undoubtedly have better races than ever before witnessed here.

There are at present 150 horse stalls on the grounds, and preparations are being made to build additional ones to meet the great demand. Many additional stalls for cattle, sheep and swine have already been built, and the management will be able to provide for all who desire to participate.

The music at the fair will be furnished by the Wheeling Opera House brass band. A rare concert of melody will be given each day.

On the first day of the fair, the band will make a grand tour of Wheeling, Martin's Ferry, Etnaville, Bridgeport, West Wheeling, Bellaire and Benwood, and return to the grounds, where they will render delightful music, for which this band is noted.

"COALBOX" ON THE THRONE.

He Accepts the Chair of the President of the Second Branch of Council and Makes a Speech.

Council was to have met last night, but owing to an indisposition to concentrate on the part of the Second Branch, there was no quorum of that side of the hall, and the First, which got a quorum quite early, had to adjourn without transacting any business.

After half a dozen members of the Second had sat about the room and smoked and talked and eaten peanuts till they were tired, a little horse play was indulged in. Clerk Hanke, of the First, called a bogus roll, and the reporters answered present to every name mentioned, from Detective Gribble to Toby Vance and Barney Brady. The body could not be declared open until it had a presiding officer, and Gus Garbey, alias "Charley Coalbox," who has been elected to every office in the gift of the people, and who was at last night's meeting particularly to be sworn in as "overseer der lectrische light," was induced to occupy the chair usually graced by Hon. Frank Jepson. Garbey rapped for order, and got it, after which loud cries of "speech," "speech," were heard. Garbey rose very gracefully and delivered himself of an address concerning the profrugality of the Electrical Commission which was not understood by anyone, but which was loudly applauded by all. When he finished he had a full house but still not a quorum, and loud calls of "Emshemer," "Emshemer," were heard. The Senator took it as an insult to be asked to speak after Garbey and refused for once to orate.

It finally dawned upon Garbey that he was being made the butt of a joke, and he left the chair. The meeting broke up and the First adjourned and Garbey and the mayor linked arms and went down town.

STANFORD'S DOOM.

It is Fairly Launched by His Personal Organ—Why He is Strong.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 25.—A double-leaded article in this week's issue of the Weekly Argus contains the following significant paragraph: "We think if the Republican leaders will scrutinize the list of those statesmen who are not without reproach, they will not find the list a very large one, in fact, of men living at the present moment we fail to see why that list should not be narrowed down to one, the senior United States Senator from California, Hon. Leland Stanford." The Argus is generally credited with being Senator Stanford's personal organ, so that it would seem that the Senator's Presidential boom has been formally launched.

The Argus claims that Senator Stanford is stronger than his party and states that, in the first place, Mr. Stanford would command the votes of all the delegates from all the Pacific coast, no small matter in itself. In the next place the State of New York could not do less than honor that one of her sons who has distinguished himself more than any other now living who could be named. In the third place the Farmers' Alliance movement, which will undoubtedly make itself powerfully felt in the coming campaign, knows Mr. Stanford is its friend and in all matters conducive to the good of the agricultural community. A combination of these three powerful political factors would sweep all opposition before it and make Mr. Stanford's nomination for the Presidency a political necessity.

A BOLD ROBBER

Holds up a Pittsburgher in a New York Lodging House and is Worsted.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Joseph Sherer, a young man about twenty years of age, was arraigned before Justice White at the Tombs police court, charged with having stolen a watch, two pocketbooks and $580 in money from Andrew Wagner. The complainant arrived in this city Saturday night with his wife from Pittsburgh, Pa., and put up at the lodging house where Sherer lodged.

Last night Sherer asked him into his room, and after locking the door presented a pistol at his head and demanded all the money and valuables he had. Wagner gave up his possessions, and Sherer then compelled him to sign a written statement that he awarded the goods to Wagner and would never ask for "these things again." He then released Wagner, who left the house and looked for a policeman. He found Officer William Hall, to whom he told his story. Accompanied by the officer, he went back to the house and Sherer, who in the meantime had attempted to assault Mrs. Wagner, was arrested. The goods were found in his possession. Justice White held him for trial in $1,000 bail.

CHASING THE DALTONS.

It Will Be a War of Extermination and Bloodshed is Certain.

CALDWELL, KANSAS, Aug. 25.—Wm. Grimes, United States Marshal for the Indian Territory, has taken charge of the remains of the deputy sheriff who was killed by Charles Bryant, one of the Dalton gang. Mr. Grimes says that from this time it is a war of extermination; that the black flag has been raised and his deputies will shoot on sight. Several arrests of Dalton sympathizers have already been made. The trail of the Daltons have been found and every deputy marshal in the territory is on it. Marshal Grimes is in receipt of news hourly and before 48 hours pass the capture of the Dalton gang of desperadoes is anticipated. That this result will be attended by bloodshed is a foregone conclusion. Bryant was wanted for many crimes, the chief of which was the robbery of a pay train in Arizona. The Daltons are a duplicate of the James boys and much bloodshed will be witnessed before they are captured.

THEORY OF A DISASTER.

Ex-Consul Given's Opinion of the Martinique Hurricane.

THREE YEARS ON THE ISLAND.

Hostile Attitude of the Natives During the War of the Rebellion—Famous as the Birthplace of Empress Josephine—Some Very Interesting Scenes.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 25.—Twenty-nine years ago, during the early part of 1862, President Lincoln appointed Mr. William F. Given of Washington, United States consul to Martinique, an office which he filled for three years, returning in the latter half of 1865. Mr. Given is still quite a young man, engaged in active business pursuits, and, although more than twenty-five years have elapsed since he returned from the island which France prizes most among her West Indian possessions, his recollections of Martinique are of the most vivid and interesting nature, and he points out a great many inaccuracies in the published accounts of the recent terrific storms in the island, which he regards as something of an unusual occurrence and not likely to happen again in many years.

The ex-consul has the history of the island, which, by the way, is of a most interesting character, at his finger tips, and his observation of a meteorological nature fully as entertaining. Martinique is famous as the birthplace of the Empress Josephine, and a magnificent lot of memory is erected a few miles out from Fort Du France, which is the capital of the province, and not St. Pierre, as was published in some of the metropolitan dailies at the time of last week's storm, in which so many vessels were driven ashore and lives lost. The port of St. Pierre, Mr. Given says, is a favorite stopping place for cruisers and fleets and has been ever since the French acquired the territory from England early in the present century.

The famous Maximilian expedition made it a rendezvous and the Confederate blockade runners, the Alabama and Florida, put into the port during the war. An effort was made on the time to detain the Florida, but the plan did not succeed, owing to the situation of the harbor, which he describes as a large open roadstead, semi-circular in form, and affording little protection to vessels during a hurricane. The town itself is built upon a rock formation, which is a characteristic of the whole island, and on that account is regarded as peculiarly free from earthquake shocks and other volcanic manifestations, although a volcano not quite extinct is situated at not a great distance from the city, and earthquakes have occurred. Mr. Given's first day spent at St. Pierre was celebrated by a visitation, and during his stay two others were felt, but with no serious results in either instance.

He thinks Martinique the most picturesque island of the West Indies, of which he has visited quite a number, and St. Pierre the most picturesque spot in it. The city is built upon a steep and rocky elevation, and the parallel streets communicate with each other by means of a series of steps that add to the beauty of the place. The population is comprised of negroes to the extent of four-fifths of the whole number, the rest being a smattering of French, Spanish and North Americans. In 1848 the negroes revolted at the time of their liberation and massacred many of the inmates of a large seminary. The affair is still remembered as the bloodiest affray in the land's history.

A number of the whites in St. Pierre escaped to New Orleans as a refuge from the infuriated blacks and their hostile treatment there, the ex-consul thinks, was largely responsible for the friendly feeling which the inhabitants held for the Confederacy and the South generally during the civil war. So strong was this feeling that a northern sympathizer could not be found in the city, and the United States official was regarded with far from friendly eyes, although no open unpleasantness occurred at any stage of his term of service.

One thing which Mr. Given remembers with great distinctness is the size and venomous nature of the reptiles of the island, and which could frequently be found in plenty on the streets of the city, where the luxurious vegetation grows unrestrained.

He relates an incident which occurred during a visit of the Prince of Wales at St. Pierre. On the outskirts of the city is a large public garden, which is characterized by the most beautiful plants and flowers, and at this place the authorities determined to give a garden party in honor of the royal visitor. No less than thirty of the guests were bitten by reptiles during the entertainment, and the wounds invariably proved fatal. The average mortality from that source every year in St. Pierre alone reaches to the neighborhood of 100 cases.

Speaking of the late disaster Mr. Given said that from all accounts which he had read, the northern part of the island had suffered more severely than the country to the south, a fact which he thinks bears out the supposition held of late years by meteorologists that the storm belt producing the fiercest hurricanes is formed in a straight line running through the island of Gaudaloupe and Dominique, where several terribly disastrous storms were felt in the three years Mr. Given spent in the Indies. Heavy storms were of course experienced in St. Pierre, but rarely amounted to hurricanes, although the hurricane line is not more than twenty miles to the north.

Mr. Given has made the subject of tropical storms a study, and is convinced that the Martinique disaster was one of nature's freaks, which often come unexpectedly in warm countries.

A BLOODY MASSACRE

Reported from the Arctic Regions—Whaling Crews Said to Have Been Killed.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 25.—A catastrophe is reported by the Treasury Department from the Arctic regions. It is said that crews of two small steam whalers, wintering near the mouth of Mackenzie, about 600 miles east of Point Barrow, have been massacred by natives of that region. All told, the crews of the two vessels numbered sixty persons, well equipped, and provisioned for a long siege with rifles and ammunition, not so much for the purposes of defense as for supplying themselves with game. Heretofore the natives have been very friendly to the whites. Many of them are well armed, having been supplied with rifles by trading vessels, which have exchanged whisky and guns for furs. While it is a new thing for whalers to winter so far east as these two steamers have, white men have spent winters on shore with the natives and have lived with a good degree of comfort. There are several thousand natives within the boundaries described. Reindeer, wild and domesticated, abound, fur-bearing animals are found a day's journey in the interior, and game birds are found in great flocks in the open waters. Whaling crews encamped on the land would not be under any such strict discipline as might be enforced on shipboard, and if their intercourse with the natives was offensive, they have probably been overpowered by superior numbers.

Committed Suicide.

OMAHA, NEB., Aug. 25.—It begins to look as if there was additional ground for belief that Clark Woodman, who was found dead in the Grand Pacific Hotel in Chicago, committed suicide, in spite of the verdict of the coroner's jury. This belief is strengthened by developments as to his financial affairs, which were in bad shape at the time of his death.

Makes the Weak Strong

The marked benefit which people in run down or weakened state of health derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla, conclusively proves the claim that this medicine "makes the weak strong." It does not act like a stimulant, imparting fictitious strength from which there must follow a reaction of greater weakness than before, but in the most natural way Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, purifies the blood, and, in short, gives great bodily, nerve, and digestive strength.

Fagged Out

"Last spring I was completely fagged out. My strength left me and I felt sick and miserable all the time, so that I could hardly attend to my business. I took one bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it cured me. There is nothing like it." R. C. BROOKS, Editor Enterprise, Belleville, Mich.

"I derived very much benefit from Hood's Sarsaparilla, which I took for general debility. It built me right up, and gave me an excellent appetite." ED. JENKINS, Mt. Savage, Md.
